Recently Pregnant? Our Research Needs You!

Ariadne Labs - a joint center between Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Chan School of Public Health - is working with Star Legacy Foundation to reduce the rate of preventable stillbirths in the United States. Researchers would like to get the opinions of recently pregnant individuals on the health care they received during pregnancy. Participation in the study requires providing your thoughts through one virtual interview with research staff members.

Participation Requirements:

1. 18 years of age and older
2. Experienced a pregnancy in the last 12 months that lasted at least 20 weeks (about 5 months)
3. Received pregnancy care in the US

As a thank you for your time, you will receive a $25 Amazon gift card for participating in the interview
